5. No. Faculty and staff numbers will not be altered as a result of the reorganization.
6. Yes. The reorganization process looked at peer institutions across the region and country to identify organizational structures/models that have led to significant efficiencies and increases in scholarly activities.
7. . (see attached charts)
8. The proposed organizational structure is the result of significant faculty and staff participation. Faculty and staff were notified in the fall of 2016 of the need to reorganize to address the changing landscape in higher education. A call for proposals was
